

Written by U.S Immigration News
Monday, 13 January 2014 04:06 -

Happy New Year to all the readers of the U.S. Immigration News; may the joy of the New Year fill your heart.

I am very happy to report that the year 2014 is a promising month for a concrete immigration reform as widely predicted by political pundits. We are already seeing some snippets of immigration benefits that could liberate many immigrants from the mental slavery of illegal status in the United States.

USI News is happy to report that on November 15, 2013, U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Services released an internal Policy Memo titled “ Parole of Spouses, Children and Parents of Active Duty Members of the U.S. Armed Forces, the Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve, and Former Members of the U.S. Armed Forces or Selected Reserve of the Ready Reserve and the Effect of Parole on Inadmissibility under Immigration and Nationality Act § 212(a)(6)(A)(i)”

The immediate relatives' family members of anyone who is serving the U.S. military or has served in the U.S. military who entered the U.S. without inspection can now obtain green cards through the newly introduced Parole-In-Place (PIP) program. It is another way to take care of another group of immigrants in the United States by way of re-interpretation or expansion of interpretation of existing immigration law.

Those who are qualified to apply for parole-in-place and use the approval to obtain green cards

Written by U.S Immigration News
Monday, 13 January 2014 04:06 -

through adjustment of status are immediate relatives namely, spouse, parents and children of those serving in the U.S. military or has served previously who entered the United States without inspection. These are aliens without I-94 cards. The parole in place will serve as I-94 card to be used to apply for green card.

In recent years, the President has earned disfavor in some quarters particularly the immigrant communities for not keeping his promise of ensuring the passage of the Comprehensive Immigration Reform. Despite several promises made by the President, we are still waiting for the passage of an immigration bill. This new proposal from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security might be the “bailout” the president needs to help improve his approval ratings among the immigrants in 2014.

It must be noted that pursuant to INA § 212(a)(6)(A)(i), you are regarded as inadmissibility, meaning that you cannot obtain green card in the United States unless if you are qualified under Section 245(i) of the Immigration & Nationality Act if you entered without inspection.

Those who are qualified for adjustment of status under Section 245(i) INA are those whose petitions were filed before April 30, 2001 and who entered the U.S. before December 21, 2000. Anyone who entered after December 21, 2000 without inspection is regarded inadmissible. Even if such a person is married to a U.S. citizen with children he or she cannot obtain green card in the U.S. This new Parole-in-place program will provide the much needed remedy for spouses, parents and children of anyone who is currently serving or has served in the U.S. military.

According to the USCIS Policy Memo, issued on November 15, 2013 which is available to U.S. Immigration News, this parole-in-place program cures the two admissibility grounds contained in § 212(a)(6)(A)(i) INA. According to the Memo, “The first ground relates to the alien who is “present in the United States without being admitted or paroled.” This inadmissibility ground generally covers those who entered the United States without inspection (and are still in the United States). Aliens who have entered the United States without inspection, while not “arriving aliens” as defined in 8 C.F.R. § 1001.1(q), are eligible for parole because they remain applicants for admission.⁶ The second inadmissibility ground in section 212(a)(6)(A)(i) relates to the alien “who arrives in the United States at any time or place other than as designated by the [Secretary of Homeland Security].” The aliens in these two groups are covered by the parole-in-place program.

Written by U.S Immigration News
Monday, 13 January 2014 04:06 -

Sometime in 2010, this idea was floated. There was a recommendation to the President to bypass the Congress by re-interpreting existing law to grant some of the relief that would have been granted by the passage of Comprehensive Immigration Reform.

One of the prime provisions of the recommendation was that the President should give the U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Services the go ahead to expand the exercise of its discretion to grant Parole-in-Place to immigrants in the U.S. to enable them adjust their status in America. It appears with this latest Memo that there is a movement in that direction starting with the family members of those in the U.S. military. USI News believes that this program might be extended to all immigrants towards the end of President Obama's term in office if he is not able to pass a comprehensive immigration reform.

For now, if you are a spouse, parent or a child of someone in the U.S. military or someone who previously served in the U.S. military, you will need to meet with Attorney Famuyide urgently. You might be eligible for the parole-in-place and green card. It is important to note that this program is new and seeking legal counsel is very important before applying.

It must also be noted that if you have criminal records, you might not be able to get parole-in-place. Any other derogatory facts could lead to denial. Parole-in-place is not automatic. It is discretionary and according to the Memo, it should be granted "sparingly".

Parole-in-Place will be used to help spouses, parents and children of those serving in the military "to preserve family unity and address Department of Defense concerns regarding soldier safety and readiness for duty, avoid the need for spouses and children of active duty military service members to depart the U.S. and wait in foreign, often very dangerous jurisdiction for consulate processing and enable these same individuals to remain on military installations in the U.S where they can receive housing, medical, and dental, and other support services based on the active duty service member's status".

Attorney Joseph Famuyide will help you apply for parole-in-place. Act now to seek this benefit to obtain your green card in the U.S.

This article is for your information only. Please consult with a qualified immigration attorney before you apply for any immigration benefits. If you need legal assistance, please call Attorney

Breaking News: Green Cards Through Parole-In-Place For Relatives of Members of U.S. Armed Forces

Written by U.S Immigration News
Monday, 13 January 2014 04:06 -

Joseph Famuyide at 718-647-6767 or send email to jfamuyide@aol.com .

USI News